Magnificent Dedication

SUCCESSFUL OPENING NEW STRAND THEATRE

Awaited with widely spread interest, and expectancy, the glorious inaugural of the new Strand theatre under the proprietorship and personal management of Ray G. Ericsson marks a great epochal event in the annals of Ocean Beach.

Thronged to capacity with a brilliantly representative audience on the formal opening night, Friday, Nov. 6, the magnificent new temple of amusement was splendidly stamped with the seal of popular approval.

The sterling success of the new Strand theatre is very happily assured.

And most deservedly so, too!

A veritable avalanche of sincere congratulations is being showered upon the ambitious and enterprising owner-manager, Ray G. Ericsson, and his clever and charming help-mate, Mrs. Norma Ericsson, both of whom have long cherished the hope of providing the community with a playhouse containing the excellent attributes achieved through the dedication of their new Strand theatre.

May the wand of cheerful prosperity ever wave over their present possessions and all their future acquisitions!

That's the heartfelt wish of Kirk and Katherine for Ray and Norma.

DETAILED DESCRIPTION NEW STRAND THEATRE

With the publication in a later issue of "The Beach News" of a photographic reproduction of the facade of the new Strand theatre, a fully detailed description will be given of the beautiful new movie house. Meanwhile, go and enjoy a personal view of it.

CURRENT BOOKINGS AT NEW STRAND THEATRE

As a worthy echo of the brilliant opening last night of the new Strand theatre, Manager Ray Ericcson has secured Cecil B. DeMille's famous film, "The Coming of Amos" for tonight (Saturday) and on Sunday a big special will be shown at regular prices, viz.: 15c, 25c and 35c for divan loges. The star attraction will be Harold Lloyd in "The Freshman," to be followed Tuesday and Wednesday with Harry Carey in "The Texas Fool." The week-end booking on Thursday and Friday will be "The Iron Horse." Two shows are given, one at 7 p. m. and the other at 9 p. m. Go early!

"BONE DRY" BATTERIES ALWAYS READY FOR USE SAYS "BILLY" ENGLAND

The use of rubber for jars, plugs, covers and gaskets has been common to the battery trade for a long time, but the hard rubber case is a comparatively new development, says "Billy" England, the popular proprietor of the Mission Beach Garage, where a specialty is made of Willard batteries, with threaded rubber insulation.

The greatest value rubber has to the battery industry, however, lies in insulating the positive plates from the negative plates. The patented process of charged bone-dry batteries, says "Billy," enables the buyer to get a fully charged battery at a moment's notice.

FLAGS AND FLAG-RAISING

It is announced that on next Wednesday morning, Nov. 11, Armistice Day, the women of the U. S. Grant circle of the G. A. R. will present our school with a new flag. There will be a special program for flag raising, followed by the pledge to the flag and the singing of the Star Spangled Banner by the student body. All citizens are invited to attend the exercises.

Another flag presentation will be arranged for Parents' Day, Monday, Nov. 16, when a large new flag, given by the Ocean Beach Chamber of Commerce, will be presented with appropriate ceremonies.

NEW CLUBS

Two new clubs are being organized. The Cartoonists' club, under the supervision of Mr. Holt, mechanical drawing instructor, promises to be one of unusual interest. The purpose of the club is to develop skill in cartooning and drawing.

The Radio club, personally supervised by Mr. Dildine, who presides serene in the woodworking department, is another club of interest. There will not be any time to actually build a radio set, Mr. Dildine asserts, but there will be time to have code practice and explanation of complicated parts.

BAND CLASS

Mr. Nashold, band instructor for San Diego schools, has promising material at Point Loma Hi. Of the 27 pupils in the band, six are beginners, and 21 experienced players. The band class meets every Wednesday, third period. The first twenty minutes are given to the beginners and the remainder of the hour to the more experienced players.

Although essential band instruments are missing, and the school is new, Mr. Nashold hopes in a short while to have a band second to none.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS

Mr. Holt announces that his Sunday school class will meet at 9:45 o'clock next Sunday morning, Nov. 8, at the Union Congregational church, Ocean Beach.

SHAVERS

The Shavers' club, most active and largest bunch of fellows at Point Loma "Hi," has proceeded so rapidly that not only have they chosen their officers and committees, but they have also put them to work!

The constitution of the Shavers' club is a wonderful document, for if read aloud it would embody the same ideas as the preamble to the constitution of the Barbers' union; yet, if understood, would make the reader gasp with amazement, for it is so perfectly constructed, so plain and yet so clear, that it deserves to be classed with the Constitution of the United States of America.

The Shavers' club has been divided into committees, each of which has an implied duty. The club has been divided so that every member is on one committee.

The first committee is the welcome committee. Arnold Losey is chairman. The committee includes: Ben Burnham, Arnold Mohmer, Nathan Pierce, Don Tibbetts.

The "pep" and welfare committees, Nelson and Dunning, chairmen, are coming strong, and are expected to broadcast the purpose and ideas of the Shavers' club.

The club at present has fifty-one members.

HALLOWE'EN PARTY

The members of the Girls' league and the Shavers' club held a Hallowe'en party on the last Friday in October. The music room was decorated in Hallowe'en colors, and about a hundred students enjoyed an afternoon program of games and dancing. Refreshments were served.

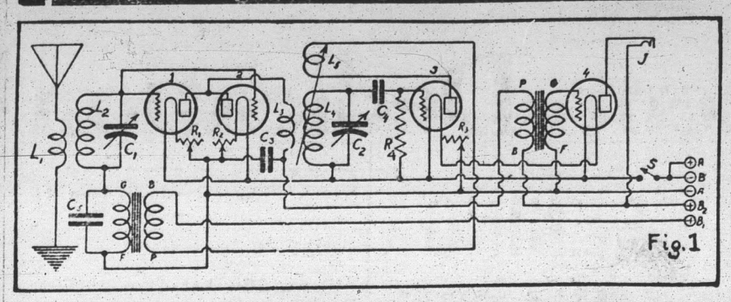
RADIO



Four-Tube Receiver in Which RF Stage Is Connected in Two Tubes; Detector Is Regenerative; First Audio Stage Reflexed in Parallel Stage.

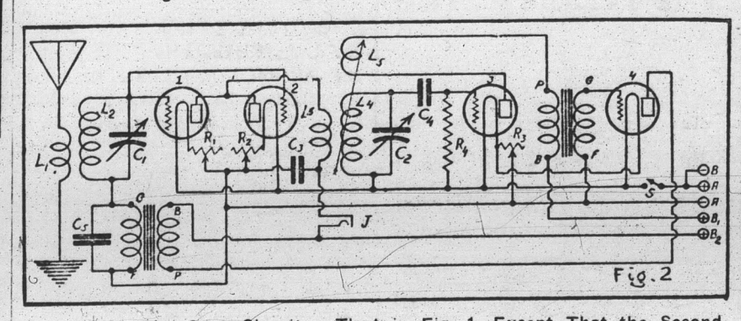


Diagram Showing Same Circuit as That in Fig. 1, Except That the Second Audio Stage Is the Reflexed One, Instead of the First.

By SIDNEY E. FINKELSTEIN, in Radio World.

For the fan who has made many sets some variations on the accepted themes are very inviting, hence two circuits are presented that offer encouragement to those who like to work out solutions from suggested data.

The first circuit (Fig. 1) consists of a stage of tuned radio-frequency amplification, with its two tubes connected in parallel, a regenerative detector, the first stage of audio reflexed in the parallel-connected tubes, the second stage of audio being "solo."

The other circuit (Fig. 2), using the same principle, makes the last audio stage the reflexed one. The parallel connection of the tubes in the reflexed stage is retained.

Only one reason for connecting tubes in parallel may be advanced—to make them share equally the load of the stage in which they are connected. With RF amplification so popular often there is too much of it, so that distortion arises from RF causes, no less than from an overburden of audio current.

Two Audio Stages Employed.

As the test is one for reducing the overload, if any, two audio stages must be employed. Some may find that the hook-ups as suggested will improve the quality of reception. At least experimenters may establish to their own satisfaction which of the two methods, if either, gives them better results in quality, and possibly even greater volume than obtained heretofore, when the four tubes were hooked up simply in straight fashion.

Constructors who have test boards will find the circuits very interesting subjects of experiment. The change involved in making one into the other is slight.

The set, in point of distance getting, will not accomplish any more than the regulation hook-up. But if a fan is troubled with distorted reception, instead of introducing resistances across audio transformers, or condensers that cut down the volume, he may try either or both of the methods outlined, and see if he cannot get very clear reception without any reduction in volume.

L1L2 is a radio-frequency transformer and C1 is a variable condenser of correct capacity to tune the secondary L2 throughout the band of broadcasting. L3L4L5 is a 3-circuit tuning coil in which L5 is the tickler. C2 tunes L4. C3 is a by-pass condenser, about .001 mfd.. So is C5. R4 is a grid leak, about 2 megohms.

The tubes are numbered 1, 2, 3 and 4. In effect tubes 1 and 2 represent only one stage in either diagram. The input is to the two grids and the output is from the two plates. These two tubes should be of the same type.

Two Tubes in Parallel.

The RF load on the tube is partly determined by the number of turns on the primary L3. Generally speaking, the lesser the inductance and coupling, the lesser the tendency to overload. But unless one has a ratio of at 4-to-1 there may be losses, i. e., insufficiency transfer of energy. Assuming, therefore, one has the type of windings most commonly used, where that ratio is used, or something near it, there may be still quite a tendency to ask too much RF work of the first tube. Hence we will use two tubes in parallel for accomplishing only the same quantitative results. Now, not to require the use of any more tubes than would the standard hook-up, we must resort to reflexing. That often causes difficulties and if the reflexing isn't a careful wiring job, with proper regard for position and length of leads, all attempts to attain improved results are almost certain to fail. Hence be careful of your reflex work.

Now, the last audio tube handles the heavier audio load. Maybe that is the one that should be reflected, since the signals are to be delivered into the parallel-connected stage, which it is assumed are able to handle them best. But the experimenter may find that the audio load is not the troublesome one. The radio load having been shared satisfactorily between the two tubes (1 and 2), the reflex idea may be embodied solely for the object of avoiding the extra tube, and not for remedying any condition due to an audio overload. Therefore, in such a case, the first audio stage would be properly reflexed. Also the leads would be shorter that way.

Fans who do not care much about the cost entailed may omit the reflexing entirely and use either parallel-connected tubes in the radio stage or in the last audio stage or in both places, as an experiment.

The two sets shown in the diagrams work well, as do the two others suggested. The problem is for the experimenter to decide whether the parallel idea is worth while and if so, whether for radio or audio reasons, or for a combination of both.

To Use Neutroformer in Your Single-Tube Set

Here is R. D. hook-up which uses a unit the same as a radio frequency transformer in the neutrodyne set. The coil L1 consists of ten turns of No. 26 dsc. wire on a 3-inch tube which is slipped inside of coil L2. This latter coil consists of 58 turns of No. 26 dsc. on a 2¾-inch tube. C represents a 23-plate condenser attached to the L2.

To tune, writes a Michigan correspondent in Radio Digest, vary C for the wave length variations and follow up with the variometer for regeneration. Keep the two in such relation that it is just below the point where a rushing sound is heard. If properly constructed and operated the set will give excellent results on a 199 tube with an electric light circuit aerial. With the same kind of an aerial and two 199 tubes as audio frequency amplification I have heard Mexico City, stations in California and two Cuban stations. I have a total list of 88 stations.

RADIO RHYMES

By Robert Stewart Sutliffe.

IN THE EVENING

WHEN the snow is on the roadway and the wind a blowing hard,
And the weather uninviting as you look out in the yard;
(Or perhaps down south you're living and you have no place to go)
Then's the time you feel like giving your thanks for radio.

When your family's 'round about you, and the things are cleared away,
And the daily paper's finished and you haven't much to say;
Though you live out in a section where all things are mighty slow,
You can brush away dejection if you have your radio.

You get the folks to listen as you plug into your set,
And they cannot help but marvel at the wondrous things you get;
For you hear some star a-singing at some distant big-town show,
Or a jazz that comes a-swinging through the air by radio.

Perhaps some fellow's talking about the stars above,
Or some young maid reciting some poem that you love;
Or perhaps the girls are dancing to a tune from Chicago,
A thousand things entrancing are for you by radio.
Then time comes for retiring and you go along to bed.

Will Solve Old Problem

When radio encircles the earth one of the problems of making both ends meet will be solved.

Infants Quaintly Dressed

The broad-beamed Dutch children are carried about on the arm and hip, much as American babies are. They are dressed in garments cut out in the same patterns as those of their parents, but when all are put on except the outer robe, they are folded over the feet and laced across like the Italian bambino. These babies invariably wear caps, some of them heavily wadded to prevent serious harm resulting from a fall. The babies of Markaan and of Vollemdam are really curious sights in their quaint caps.

KHAN SHAH was a good tiger, highly respected in the neighborhood. Do not be surprised at this, because there are both good and bad tigers, though, as with human beings, the reputation of the daring criminal is likely to occupy more news space than the virtuous, law-abiding citizen. Hence Khan Shah was unknown to the world at large, but almost deified by the villagers within range of his labor.

It was Khan Shah who preserved the crops from spoliation by killing off the deer and wild hogs, and he it was who drove away a suspicious-looking vagrant of his own tribe; but never, under any circumstances, had he been known to harm man, child or tame beast. Therefore the villagers built a little altar to Khan Shah, upon festival occasions presented him with an old cow long past bringing any price, and dignified him by the title "Protector of His People."

So when the rains had swept over the land, and the bright green of the fresh crop rose above the brown soil, giving excellent promise, a villager, catching a glimpse of the golden yellow of Khan Shah's supple form, with its soft velvet stripes, leaping through the nearby jungle in chase of deer or wild hog, he saluted him with great respect.

"Salaam, Khan Shah! May your huntership be ever successful, your teeth and claws kept well sharpened. May you always guard the crops of this people."

Indeed, in the pride and strength of his full perfection, Khan Shah was a tiger to be admired. The great head hung upon his massive shoulders, with its black rosettes and the delicate silver threads of whiskers, was purely majestic. In every movement of his long, agile body, ending in the wide sweeps of his sinuous, black-ringed tail, was grace above adverse comment. Khan Shah, standing in a shaft of golden sunlight against a background of emerald foliage, was an object to stay the real hunter's finger on the trigger of his rifle.

But gradually the burnished yellow of Khan Shah's body began to fade into the tawny shade, the velvet stripes took on almost a rusty hue, a gray tint appeared upon his muzzle, and his head swung lower in a stride which did not have the easy motion as of yore. Somehow, too, Khan Shah began to fail in his spring upon the deer and wild hogs, and the crops suffered in consequence.

Not that the villagers lost faith in Khan Shah quickly. They said that his spirit was gone hunting in other grounds, and must be brought back to his proper duty. So they made offerings and burned incense before his shrine, while Khan Shah, lying not so very far off, licked his paws over the discovery that his claws had grown blunt, that his joints were stiff, therefore it was hard for him to catch the deer and wild hogs. Moreover, he was becoming lean on that account, and some other way must be found to satisfy his natural appetite.

Some persons hold that animals do not possess reasoning power or sentiment, that they are guided merely by what we call instinct. Perhaps, then, it was instinct which moved Khan Shah to cast a hungry eye on the fat goats in the White Sahib's compound, instead of the lean cattle of his own people, and had nothing whatever to do with a tiger's conscience. In any case, the fat goats began to disappear, and the White Sahib took notice.

"Who is stealing my goats?" he demanded of his native butler.

"Sir," replied the butler, who knew the real culprit, "the police have been informed of this matter, and say that it is a thief from another district. In future the Sahib's goats will be locked up at night."

If Khan Shah was to be convicted on the charge of goat stealing, assuredly the evidence would not be forthcoming from his own people.

With the White Sahib's goats cut off from his food supply, Khan Shah roamed further afield and killed a bullock, the property of a village some ten miles away. Also, in that same village, a man was dragged forth from his hut, without sound, in the dead of night, being heard of no more, and the people rose up and called upon their White Sahib to see into the matter. That White Sahib found pugs (tigers' footprints) in the dust, held a council of the headmen, and laid the crime pretty fairly on the right striped shoulders. So he wrote to the other White Sahib, and said: "I think your tiger is up to mischief. You had better look out for him. If he comes here again he'll be shot."

The White Sahib of Khan Shah's village recollected his missing goats, and knew that the hour was near at hand when he must deal with Khan Shah. But by the law of Khan Shah's people not without proof, lest in their eyes a great crime be committed. Was Khan Shah not the Protector of His People, the reincarnation of an animal god, and cursed be he who would deal a death blow upon that sacred hide. As yet, you see, there was no proof of guilt; even then only an outcaste White Sahib could presume to be the executioner. So the White Sahib took down his rifle, carefully tested the mechanism, and filled the magazine with cartridges. Then he waited for the news he knew would come sooner or later. But it did not descend quite so shortly as he expected, for nothing was heard of Khan Shah during several weeks. Khan Shah was hiding his face from the sight of men, and his people wondered.

Now it happened that the White Sahib's house was set on the side of a hill, and from the veranda, beyond the slope of lawn, a belt of rock and scrub jungle fell down to the brink of a tank, or small lake. At evening it was the custom of the young village girls to resort to the lake, and with much mirthful splashing perform their ablutions. The White Sahib, sitting on his veranda, was pleased when these sounds reached his ears, for they meant that all was running smoothly in the village.

It was so on one particular evening, the sun sinking in crimson splendor toward the baked earth, and at some distance a haze of blue smoke rising above the thatched roofs of the village, proclaiming that cooking pots were on the fire. A peal of merry laughter from the bathing girls caused the White Sahib to come out of a reverie and turn his head downward toward the lake. But it was not the group of bathing girls that suddenly concentrated his gaze. His glance had lit upon a slowly moving yellow object, creeping stealthily in and out among the rocks, with a course set obviously toward the bathing girls. For a moment the yellow object came into full view, swinging its head backward as if to make sure of a retreat.

The White Sahib rose quickly and went in for his rifle—Khan Shah's hour having come in his evidently murderous design upon the bathing girls. There was not much time to lose, for Khan Shah was within a few leaps of the lake; but the White Sahib judged from experience that Khan Shah would proceed cautiously in this his first assault in the open. He would probably wait until one of the girls came out of the water, and then seize his helpless victim. So the White Sahib made an equally cautious detour among the rocks, with the intention of cutting in between Khan Shah and the bathing girls, whose actions and voices proclaimed complete innocence of danger. But something caused Khan Shah to change his purpose; in fact, gaining scent of the White Sahib, to take up his trail, creeping in his footsteps. Thus the hunter became the hunted, with the White Sahib beginning to wonder what on earth had become of Khan Shah, who ought to have been where he clearly was not. Little did the White Sahib imagine how more than once he was almost within Khan Shah's claw grip, and that for the most part Khan Shah's red, gleaming eyes were full upon him. In this way they trailed each other among the rocks, when the White Sahib was moved to turn back on his course.

A cavernous growl from the top of a rock not more than three paces distant, and a foot or two above his head caused the White Sahib to look up with a start. Crouching low was Khan Shah, with every savage instinct kindled into immediate action.

The White Sahib understood something of the ways of tigers, and, therefore, to attempt retreat would be suicide. He flung himself down under cover of the rock, as Khan Shah's huge body swept over—a streak of faded yellow with rusty black bands. A great roar vibrated among the rocks as Khan Shah bounded to earth, but even then the White Sahib knew better than to shoot. Resting on one knee, with his rifle to the shoulder, the White Sahib waited for Khan Shah to present a vital spot.

As Khan Shah wheeled in savage rage in having missed his mark, a little spurt of flame shot from the barrel of the White Sahib's rifle, and that which went with it found a lodging in Khan Shah's brain. But that was not quite the end of Khan Shah.

Presumably the people of the village heaped praise and honor on the White Sahib's head for having saved their daughters from the jaws of Khan Shah. Not at all. Instead they called him a murderer in their hearts, and secretly sent up a petition for his removal. They held that no crime had been proved against Khan Shah, and that he was the Protector of His People from deer and wild hogs. Even so he is still such, for in the gray of early morning does not his spirit hover on the outskirts of their fields, and is not the food set down before his shrine always eaten? The White Sahib, of course, does not believe these things; but then who is the White Sahib in India? A few hundred years ago he was not there, a few hundred years, perchance, Khan Shah will be honored when he is forgotten. Like him, others have come and gone, but India remains the same forever.

We Wished So, Too

Bobby, our neighbor's young son, was in the habit of having lunch occasionally at our house. One day after partaking of a hearty meal he leaned contentedly back in his chair, lost his balance, and in desperation grabbed the tablecloth. Continuing to fall he landed in a heap of dishes, food and tablecloth.

After picking himself up and viewing the ruin, he remarked, "Gee, I wish I was home."—Exchange.

Noiseless Rubber Streets

Some of our scientists continue to be more speculative than the widest prophets. Prof. A. M. Footsteps In The Night

Contributed to "The Beach News"

By Virginia Howard

Mission Beach, California

The night was dark and dreary, the air cold. I could hear the tempestuous wind as it seemed to wrestle with stationary objects, to moan and groan in an effort to wreck the house in the fury of despair. Truly this was a night for evil doers, the darkness could cover each movement, and the slow drizzle of rain would eventually erase footsteps should any be made, and the wind howling at intervals would completely drown all ordinary sound unless it somewhat abated its fury.

Suddenly I became aware of a feeling of fear; something was wrong. A slight lull in the wind and a strange noise came to me. It seemed to be right outside the sleeping porch; then I distinctly heard the back door open. I knew that sound well, for the hinges have a peculiar squeak, and I remembered that I had not latched the door.

Someone, perhaps a thief, was in the house and I thought of the fact that dad had been carrying a large sum of money lately. I also thought of the fact that he slept with an automatic under his pillow. All this flashed through my mind subconsciously. I was thankful for the sudden gust of wind which howled around the corner of the house, deadening all sound, but tearing my nerves with uncertainty.

The wind ceased as suddenly as it had started and all too evident to my unwilling ears came the sound of footsteps, slow, uncertain, cautious; but certainly footsteps of someone unfamiliar with the house. Into the kitchen from the porch, advancing slowly as if afraid of barking the shins on some obstacle.

I held my breath and tried to catch some sound to inform me that some other member of the family had heard, but none came. Nevertheless, I listened, expecting to hear the automatic speak its message of death and hear the body lifelessly fall to the floor. A terrible fear clutched me. I trembled for the thief in the night who knew not how well prepared for him we were.

Again the wind broke out furiously. It swooped around the corner as if in a frenzy at the recent lull but it did not last long.

The footsteps were coming back, through the kitchen again, then on the sleeping porch and out the door with the squeeky hinges and around the side of the house. I could sense someone pulling aside the canvas which covered my room; then a cold, cold hand covered mine and slipped up to my elbow.

Icy fear clutched my heart. I seemed to stop breathing; my lips seemed sealed; my tongue would not form audible words. I struggled in an agony of fright, when suddenly like an arrow loosed from a bow, the awful stillnes was split with a shout. "Help! Help!"

The calm voice of dad answered me from the next room. "What's the matter, kid? Turn over and go to sleep."

S. D. A. & N. Academy

Latest students to report for duty include Yeoman of San Diego, McGill of Chula Vista and Morris and Mayo of Los Angeles.

A banquet is planned for this week-end at the Casa de Mañana, La Jolla. This will be given by the sophomore class, which now numbers about fifty-one.

The academy regret to lose Cadet Frederick W. Merman, of Santa Ana, who has been withdrawn because of ill health. By the direction of his physicians, he must live in Arizona for some time to come.

J. Fred Hesse, one of the graduates of last year, visited the academy recently. Cadet Hesse has received an appointment to West Point, and will be back again for some post-graduate work during the second semester.

Commander Dibrell, U. S. Navy, visited his son, Cadet A. G. Dibrell, Jr., during the week.

Mrs. W. J. MacNeil, Los Angeles, stopped for a brief visit with her son, Cadet Kenneth Norton, en route to Murietta Springs for a sojourn of some weeks.

Letters from Lieut. Coger, of Los Angeles, indicate that he is convalescing rapidly, and we hope that he will soon be in school again.

HAWAIIAN MOVIE

At noon last Wednesday, a movie of the Hawaiian Islands was give in Room 9. Two hundred pupils were present during the showing of the film, and all agreed that it was "wera, wera good." Mr. Easton, chemistry instructor, lived six years in the Hawaiian Islands before he came to America, and is well acquainted with all the interesting and picturesque scenes on the islands.

The film that was shown was made by a photographer in Honolulu under the auspices of the Hawaii Tourist Bureau. The purpose of the film is to acquaint the people in America with the real life and surroundings in Hawaii. The film showed the four islands, Kauai, Oahu, Molakai, Maui, and Hawaii.

PAPER! PAPER!

Mr. Reynolds, most excellent printing instructor, has confidentially disclosed to our reporter that Point Loma will have a paper very soon. The name has not been decided upon, but everyone knows that when the name is settled upon it will be the best one possible.

The first page of the proposed paper, Mr. Reynolds stated, will be adorned with "cuts" made by the art department. The second and third pages will be editorials and general news, Mr. Reynolds assured, and will be interesting to all readers. The fourth page will be sports which, Mr. Reynolds declared, will be the best, page in the paper.

Mr. Reynolds has 45 boys in his classes, a number quite sufficient, he says, to put out a 9x12 page paper.

MIGHTY FOOTBALL BATTLE

Last Wednesday, Nov. 4, was the scene of a mighty battle, none the less interesting though Point Loma was on the losing end. Point Loma fought hard and the team rallied again and again, yet the heavier and more experienced Memorial team kept scoring.

The game started promptly at 3 o'clock, Memorial kicking off. Point Loma ran the ball back, and after two unsuccessful line plunges, kicked on the third down.

Up to and through the second quarter, both teams seemed to be evenly matched, one team gaining as often as the other.

In the beginning of the second quarter the Point Loma team made its only touchdown. Memorial's kick from the 20-yard line was blocked, and Omaro, end, fell on the ball one-half yard from the goal line. Memorial's team, being heavier, held the locals back or the first two downs. On the third down, however, Ochoa, fullback, placed the ball over the line for 6 points. Losey, halfback, dropped the ball neatly between the goal posts, giving Point Loma 7 point.

Memorial was not beaten, however, for immediately afterward they made a touchdown, failing, however, to make the extra point.

The third and fourth quarters turned into a veritable slaughter with the Wildcats on the slaughtering end. Memorial, after long practice, had perfected a criss-cross that would have puzzled Caesar. Time and again they used this play, making yards practically every time; still the local bone-crushers could not solve it.

In the third quarter Memorial made two touchdowns and kicked both extra points, making the score 20-7 in favor of Memorial.

In the last quarter Point Loma rallied, and only one touchdown was added to Memorial's score. In the last few minutes of play, though, the Memorial team kicked a field goal, the only one of the game, rounding the score to an even 30-7, in Memorial's favor.

Point Loma's line-up was as follows: Ends, Jones and Omara; tackles, Stevens (captain) and Burnham; guards, Markel and Harrison; center, Berkeley; quarterback, Driscoll; halfbacks, Dyer and Losey; fullback, Ochoa.

Cueto, Roberts, Justice, Melson, Bennett, Cline, Hughes, Davis, Howell, Tibbetts, Wells and Schenkel were substitutes, most of whom were used during the game. Cline, star fullback, was not able to play, due to minor injuries, but is expected to be on next week's line-up.

"I SHOULD WORRY" LAWS

Socialistic or state insurance is the antithesis of saving. It encourages one to spend all his earnings, confident that the state will care for the improvident, the old. Compulsory state insurance for auto drivers means to take away the restraint of civil damage suits, and to instill the lawless thought that "the state pays the bills—I should worry!" There is no safe protection against wantonly penniless old age, against vicious and contemptous driving, save the enforcement of the theory of personal savings and personal responsibility.

RADIO AND HEALTH

The influence of the radio, increasing as it does the pleasures of life in the home, is a great factor in conservation of health.

Radio service in many of the states includes broadcasting of what are known as health exercises, or doing what is known as the "daily dozen."

These physical exercises in the home are supplemented by sending out illustrated charts free from the broadcasting station, illustrating the application of this radio feature.

The managing director of one station reports requests from more than 5,000 homes or the illustrated physical culture chart.

When you consider that hundreds of stations in all parts of our country are sending out these health exercises, the radio as a family doctor is reaching mililons of people.

HERE'S HOW TO STOP THAT SNORING

Sniffing powdered sugar every night for a period of from three to six weeks will greatly relieve halitosis and also break the disagreeable habit of snoring, says Dr. J. G. Edwards, a famous St. Louis osteopath, in a recent treatise on the cause and cure of catarrh.

MODIFYING RADIO "SILENCE"

Modification of the regulations compelling radio stations to maintain strict silence when a distress signal is on the air from a vessel at sea will be looked upon with favor by American government officials when the nations of the world get together to amend and reconstruct the laws of the air.

NEW ERA FOR AGRICULTURE

New York.—A new era lies ahead for agriculture because it now commands the best economic thought of the business world directed on its prime requirements of better distribution and marketing, President W. C. Gordon of the State Bank Division, American Bankers Association, declares in a recent communication to the thirteen thousand members of the division. He seeks to enlist their interest in the work of improving the marketing of farm products.

"The farmer today finds himself far removed from his consumer-customer by a long line of intermediate agencies, which often leave him in a position of disadvantage as an individual producer," Mr. Gordon says. "It is, therefore, not strange that he should seek to apply to agriculture those principles of production and distribution found successful in industry. His rightful ambition is to make, where feasible, a general application of successful business experience to the marketing of agricultural products. Commanding the best economic thought of the business world, agriculture undoubtedly stands on the threshold of a new era. In lieu of fantastic panaceas, agricultural welfare—which, after all, is the Nation's welfare—has need of a sane, long range program that is at once practical, constructive and economically sound."

He goes on to call attention to the "long view program suggested for agricultural distribution" at Washington by the Agricultural Conference, urging study of it.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

KNOCK AT THE DOOR

YOU cannot hope to gain entrance to friendship except by knocking at her door with the courage and courtesy which invariably insure admittance.

And this is equally true of everything of worth in life, quite regardless of the opinions of those who are prone to think otherwise.

If you would be on intimate terms with Wisdom, you must knock at her golden door every day.

You may rail at the idea, but if you miss a day or two a week you will find when you go to call again that some one more persistent has been ahead of you, and picked the choicest flowers in the front garden.

In all that concerns life, especially the vital things, if you would sit with those who occupy the front pews, wear the best clothes, lock arms with high society, know how to entertain a prince or a pauper without lofty affectation or mongrel condescension, you must first knock at the door and gain proficiency by frequent knockings and regular visits.

You may daub a canvas with color, sail a boat on an unruffled stream, sing a commonplace song which the boys of the street whistle without missing a note, play the piano, do exquisite embroidery work in imitation of the piece before you, but if you wish to excel beyond the mere copyist and become a master in every sense of the word, you must keep knocking.

In matters of art and intellect there is no other way to improve or advance except by going often to the door of Wisdom and picking up knowledge first hand.

You may be tempted to hint that this requires too much work, too many long hours of studious application to things with which you feel you are already intimately acquainted, but if you will march out your productions on dress parade and line them up side by side with others, you will not be long in discovering defects which may sicken your heart.

But if you are made of the right material, and have within your breast an inflexible determination to go to the top, such comparisons will not be odious.

It is only by hearing superior music, or by seeing a masterpiece in painting or sculpture, that we learn to know the inferior and thus gain an eminence where we find an inexpressible pleasure in imparting our hard-earned knowledge to others.

THE ONLY THING

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

MAN need not with his mind dispute
Nor with his heart debate;
The Lord has laid him out his route,
And laid it pretty straight.
It's oftener rather hard to see
Which road the pleasantest will be,
But ev'ry fellow knows at sight
Which road, of all life's roads, is right.

What else need anybody know?
And what is there to talk?
We know the road we ought to go,
The path we ought to walk;
And though we hem and though we haw,
And wisely talk about "the law,"
Man needs no lawyer to decide,
With his own conscience for his guide.

We may not know which path will pay
The largest pay in gold;
Not always it's the narrow way,
Or so I have been told.
But what has that to do with it?—
Although we hesitate a bit,
In our own hearts, and all along,
We know the right road from the wrong.

One road has pleasure all the way,
And some are rock and fire,
And some a recompense will pay
A Midas might desire.
But, though we sometimes hesitate,
And with our conscience would debate,
We know the right, both I and you—
And that's the only thing to do.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

by Mary Graham Bonner

COPYRIGHT BY WESTERN NEWSPAPER UNION

MISERABLE MEASLES

"Dear me, dear me, and isn't that just too bad," said Peter Gnome.

It Took Them a Long Time to Pack.

"What is the trouble?" asked the other gnomes.

"I've just heard bad news," said Peter Gnome.

"Can we be of any help? What is the trouble?" the others asked.

"I'm going to see what I can do about it right away," said Peter Gnome.

"You see I have just heard that my dear little friend, Caroline, has measles. Yes, those Mean Measles have gone to visit her."

"No wonder you feel angry and sad," said the other gnomes.

"Tell us about Caroline," they urged.

"Caroline is a very dear friend of mine," Peter Gnome commenced.

"She is a perfect dear, that's what she is, Gnomes, a perfect dear!

"She doesn't know that I am a friend of hers, because when I see my children friends I always wear my invisible robe.

"That means that no one can see me. I'm shy. I don't like to be seen, any more than the Queen of the Fairies likes to be seen.

"But I have so many children friends, children whom I love and in whom I am interested, and even though they never see Peter Gnome's face, he is their little friend.

"Caroline has big, dark eyes, and dark, curly hair and soft skin. She is not very tall, and she is not very short.

"She is just a perfect size. She goes to school and is an excellent student. She jumps classes, which means, Gnomes, that she has gone ahead of others and has been put up higher in the school world.

"She's bright, that's what she is.

"In the summer she goes off to the mountains or to the seashore and she comes home with her darling little face all tanned.

"Her eyes are brighter than ever, and she looks so well.

"In the winter she lives in the city, in a very big city.

"Well, I have just heard that those Mean Measles have gone to visit her. They are so miserable and mean. You know how it is—they go about without being invited, just as do the Tonsil Twins and the Whooping Cough Wretches.

"To be sure, none of them would ever be invited anywhere. They aren't visitors any one wants. They pack their suitcases with colds and coughs and sore throats and fevers and aches instead of with swimming suits and tennis rackets and toothbrushes and nighties and such things that ordinary people would take with them.

"But they go without invitations, and they love to go to see children.

"They are so mean that they like to go to especially nice people—and you know, Gnomes, children are especially nice people.

"They went to visit my little friend Lucy, as you remember. They have left her—some time ago. But now they have gone to see Caroline. Caroline is a neighbor of Lucy's, and they're both the best of friends.

"But, as you notice, while I've been talking, I've been getting my things ready, and I must be off now to see if I can't make those Miserable Mean Measles leave the charming Caroline."

Caroline Felt Better.

Peter Gnome was off, and when Caroline was asleep he had a long talk with the Mean Measles. And by promising them a ride in an airship he persuaded them to leave Caroline.

But it took them time to pack up—they still lingered about—but the next morning after Peter Gnome's visit Caroline felt better.

For the Miserable, Mean Measles were getting ready to go.

YOUR Last Name

IS IT THATCHER?

THERE are several names beginning in Thack and Thatch that recall to mind a trade that was once usual but which today has practically passed out of existence. This is the trade of making thatch roofs or thatching. Thackeray and Thackwray probably meant thatched-way. Thackwell meant thatch-well and was probably applied to one who was reputed to be a good thatcher. Thake and Theak mean simply thatch while Thacker, Theaker and Thackster, are variations of Thatcher.

The first of the name here was Thomas Thatcher, first minister of Old South church in Boston. His father was Peter Thatcher, who was rector of St. Edmund's parish in Salisbury, England. Thomas came in 1635, went first to Weymouth and then to Boston.

ROSE—There are many possible derivations for this name. In fact there are many different Rose families, which may have gained the name in many different ways. In this country of late years Rose has been taken as a shortened form of many German names beginning with Rosen, such as Rosenburg, Rosenbaum, names usually possessed by Hebrews. However Rose is a good old English name. It is sometimes akin with Row, when it is a discriptive local name. Again it may have been derived from a first name Rose or Rosamond. Often it was a sign name. John at the Rose, for instance, would have been a tradesman who did business in a shop at the sign of the rose.

WHO SAID

"All Is Lost Save Honor"

THESE words are attributed to Francis I, King of France, when he learned that his armies had been defeated by those of Emperor Charles of Austria, and that he would be forced to forfeit a large part of his dominions.

Francis I was born in 1494 and died in 1547. He ascended the French throne in 1515, having succeeded his uncle, Louis XII. He laid claim to the city of Milan, and in enforcing his claim, defeated the Swiss on the plains of Marignano and forced the reigning duke, Maximilian Sforza, to acknowledge his claims.

In the year 1519, Francis became one of the competitors for the empire of Maximilian but the choice fell on Charles of Austria, the grandson of Maximilian, and from that time on the two monarchs were bitter rivals. Charles assumed the title of Charles V., and his armies and those of Francis I were continually warring. Both sought the aid of England and the support of the English government was, at different times, with Francis and then with Charles.

It was with the idea of cementing the friendship existing between him and the king of England that Francis I invited the English monarch, Henry VIII, to an interview which took place near Calais.

In the year 1521, war broke out between Francis and Charles and Francis was finally taken prisoner. He was granted his release only on condition that he renounce his claim to some of his greatest possessions. A later war in which England sided with Francis prevented the carrying out of these demands of Charles, but soon after this Francis found himself engaged in another war in which the fickle king of England sided with Charles. Peace was concluded at Crespy, very fortunately for the worn-out armies of the French monarch.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

WHEN you have exhausted all ways of cooking the delicious hubbard squash try:

Souffled Squash.

Take a medium-sized squash, remove the seeds and stringy portion, then peel off the rind. Place in a steamer and cook over boiling water until tender, then mash and season to taste with salt, pepper and butter. To two cupfuls of mashed squash add gradually one cupful of cream and when well mixed, the yolks of two well beaten eggs. Mix well, then fold in the whites of the eggs beaten stiff. Pour into a buttered baking dish and bake in a moderate oven until firm. Serve at once.

Bread Sponge Cake.

Take one and one-half cupfuls of sugar, three-fourths of a cupful of lard and butter mixed, two well beaten eggs, one-fourth of a cupful of sweet milk, two cupfuls of bread sponge, three cupfuls of flour and one teaspoonful of soda. Add spices, raisins, and a few nuts, mix well and let rise then bake.

Stuffed Onions.

Parboil large-sized onions, take out the centers, leaving a cavity to hold the filling. Chop the onion removed from the center, mix with cold sausage meat or bacon and crumbs with seasoning. Fill the centers, pour around good beef broth or add butter and water. Bake until the onions are tender, basting occasionally. Cover each with a spoonful of buttered crumbs and brown before serving.

Golden Fleece.

To one cupful of cream in a frying pan add one-half pound of cheese broken up into bits, adding a dash of cayenne. When smooth break over this mixture five or six eggs, cover two minutes; when the white is set, remove the cover, add salt and beat the mass briskly for a few minutes. Serve on buttered crackers.

Derisive Nickname

The nickname "Jupiter Scapin" was conferred upon Napoleon Bonaparte by the Abbe de Pradt, in allusion to the strange mixture of greatness and pettiness manifested in his character. "Scapin" is a knavish and thievish valet in Moliere's comedy "Les Fourberies de Scapin."

"In short, when you have penetrated through all the circles of power and splendor, you were not dealing with a gentleman, at last; but with an impostor and a rogue; and he fully deserves the epithet of Jupiter Scapin, or a sort of Scamp Jupiter."—Emerson's "Representative Men."

Brain Development

Dr. J. S. Bolton, noted British psychologist, believes that men and women will some day become a race of intellectual giants compared with the present generation. We have hardly tapped the possibilities of brain development, he says. "Even when employed to the maximum by the higher individuals of the race," declares the psychologist, "the brain is only working to a tithe of its potential capacity. Few people appreciate what a large proportion of their apparent thinking is merely repetition of things learned by heart, gossip, scandal and the like."

Innocent "Burglars"

A man passing the Wilson home in George street, Providence, R. I., at night observed a dim light within. As no one was supposed to be home, he halted, and when two figures glided by the light, he called the police. A squad surrounded the house, entered it and climbed all over it, but there was no burglar. The mystery was dispelled by an inspector. He noted that a second floor room of the Hinckley home across the street bore a light and that children were moving about the room. He explained that the light was being reflected in a mirror in the Wilson home. The movements of the children, also shown in the mirror, were the "burglars."

The oddity of fur emplacements on collars and sleeves and the long revers, is distinctly Parisian. The lower edge of the collar is scalloped, disclosing glimpses of embroidering beneath it, the deep cuffs leave a portion of the sleeves at the wrist uncovered and the revers is graduated in width. Embroidered banding emphasizes the flaring hemline. This model would make a good choice when velvet is used.

warm interlining. Tucks are a favored decoration for the smaller coats, while machine stitching is popular on coats for larger girls.

Pile fabrics, including those of the needlepoint variety, suede and smooth-finished cloth, with velveteen make up a large part of the fabric list for children's coats. Colors, in addition to the usual dark browns and blues, include new shades of blue, the wine shades and rosewood, and velveteen is used for trimming the plain cloths. Fur collars are conspicuous by their presence on all sorts of coats and krimmer in collars and cuffs is the most popular choice on velveteen.

One of the most important style points in children's coats appears in the shoulder cape, which, in some instances, extends to the hipline. Usually, with these coats, a choker collar of fur carries out the military suggestion in the cape. Cape coats and one-piece frocks with shoulder capes have the support of French designers and are very becoming to children.

Besides the cape coat there are some striking novelties in autumn coat styles for young misses. Strong color contrasts in blocked patterns, as red and black, are used for straight box coats, smartly collared and cuffed with long-haired furs. Such coats are fastened with three large buttons at the front. Chinchilla cloth, in a variety of colors, lined with bright flannel, makes a cozy and substantial garment usually boasting a raccoon collar. Unique, and very American, are novel coats with scarfs to match, made of Indian blankets. The native colorings and primitive, but effective designing in the figured patterns, make them conspicuous, but good looking.

SERVE COTTAGE CHEESE IN MANY DISHES

Making Cottage Cheese for Market—A Farm Woman, Mrs. W. W. Bond of Jackson, Tenn., Who Sells About $13 Worth a Week.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Most people like plain cottage cheese, whether made at home or bought. It is especially pleasing in summer and can be used in a great many ways. It is often eaten, either salted or unsalted, with sugar and cream or whole milk. Rich sweet cream is usually blended with it when it is to be served in this way, but sour cream or melted butter may be used instead.

Flavor Combines Well.

The flavor of cottage cheese combines well with a number of other flavors. Berries, peaches, or fresh fruits served with it are good; also canned fruits, dates, raisins, or other dried fruits, brown sugar, maple sugar, honey, jam, marmalade, or chopped nuts. The European combination of gervais or cream cheese with "bar-le-duc" strawberries or currants can be closely duplicated by creamy cottage cheese and strawberry or currant preserves.

Broken nut meats, chopped pimentos, finely cut green peppers, diced cucumbers, or other crisp vegetables may also be mixed with the cheese to make appetizing combinations, suggests the United States Department of Agriculture. Horseradish, onion juice, parsley, and cottage cheese blend well in flavor. The dry cheese, when made, should be seasoned well, packed into buttered earthenware or enameled dish, chilled and turned out on platter to be served in slices. Ground sage may be used for seasoning, if liked. When put up for sale cottage cheese may be packed in cylindrical boxes made of waxed cardboard.

Especially Fine in Salads.

Cottage cheese lends itself especially well to salads. If enough is used, the salad may be the main dish of the meal. French mayonnaise or boiled dressing go well with cheese salad. The cheese may be formed into balls or slices, molded in small cups, or passed through a pastry tube. A small quantity of finely ground left-over ham or corned beef may be mixed with cottage cheese, mustard used as seasoning, and the whole served on lettuce leaves with dressing. Other foods that combine well with cottage cheese in salads are crisp, fresh vegetables; cooked or canned vegetables; fresh canned dried or preserved fruits, nuts, olives, rice, potatoes. With the last two some highly flavored and bright garnish like beets, pimentos, or green peppers should be used; and celery, cucumbers, green peppers, crisp lettuce, or cabbage may be added to give succulence. Ground raw carrots and onions combine nicely with cottage cheese.

Almost any of the foods that are used ordinarily with cottage cheese, either in serving in plain or in salad, can be combined with it for sandwich filling.

Home Canning Methods for Various Products

The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture is frequently asked why the water bath method of processing may be used in the home canning of fruits and tomatoes, whereas nonacid vegetables must be processed under pressure.

The explanation given is that for successful canning the temperature applied should ordinarily be the lowest possible that will insure a safe product. While no growing, or so-called vegetative, bacteria will survive for any length of time at the temperature of boiling water (212 F.), some bacteria are able to go into spore form. These spores are killed only by very long-continued heating at boiling temperature, especially if the fruit or vegetable being canned has juice that is alkaline or only very slightly acid. When the juices are acid, as in fruits and tomatoes, all forms of bacteria are killed more quickly at 212 degrees Fahrenheit, which is the highest temperature possible in the water bath. A water both canner is commonly understood to be any covered vessel of sufficient depth for the jars or cans to be completely immersed while processing, and equipped with a rack or false bottom which permits water to circulate around the jars or cans. A wash boiler frequently answers the purpose in the household.

Corn, peas, beans, and other vegetables that do not have acid juice need to be processed under steam pressure at temperatures higher than 212 degrees Fahrenheit, and for this reason, the steam pressure canner is recommended for canning them.

Coloring and Perfuming Soaps Is Not Hard Task

Various colors may be obtained by using aniline dyes. Dissolve a small quantity of dye in water and add slowly until the proper intensity of color desired is attained. The following are used quite extensively in coloring soaps: Red, rhodamine B., yellow, fluorescein, green, napthol green B.

Various shades, such as orange, chamois, salmon red, can be obtained by mixing the fluorescein and rhodamine B. Your druggist can supply you with these coloring compounds. Saponification of the grease should be nearly complete before adding coloring solution, as an excess of lye will destroy the coloring.

Perfumed soaps are made by the addition of artificial perfumes known as essential oils. The following are suggestions: Lavender, geranium, rosemary, hyacinth, wintergreen, sassafras, cloves, almond and bitter almond, caraway, banana, rose, palmarosa. The perfume is added just before the soap is ready to pour, and worked in by stirring. The quantity to use for a batch of soap will depend on the strength of the perfume and the individual taste. This will vary from a fraction of a dram to several drams. Your druggist can supply you with essential oils.

NOON DINNER FOR A GROWING CHILD

Foods Considered Important for Well-Planned Diet.

Here's a good dinner for a child between the ages of three and ten or for anyone else, for that matter! Egg on toast, greens, milk, bread and butter and rice with jelly—each group of foods considered important for a well-planned diet is represented in this menu, selected especially because of its suitability for a growing child. Other combinations could easily have been chosen. For example, an equally good menu would be a broiled meat cake or a portion of fresh fish, baked or broiled; stewed tomatoes, creamed potatoes and custard with a cookie.

The United States Department of Agriculture believes that simple, clean, wholesome food of the right kind, served to children in proper quantities, cannot be overestimated as a factor in assuring them normal health and sturdy development. A child between three and ten years old is usually well fed if he or she has plenty of milk, bread and other cereal food, an egg or its equivalent in meat or fish once a day, a little butter, a small portion each of carefully prepared fruits and vegetables, with a small amount of sweet food after his appetite for other foods is satisfied. If any one of these, except perhaps the sweet, is omitted his diet is likely to be one-sided.

In the feeding of children too much emphasis is often placed on the foods that they ought not to eat and too little on those that they need. The first thing to do, therefore, in planning a day's food is to arrange three attractive meals that furnish all the needed substances.

To Save Would-Be Suicides

In Berlin the number of suicides has become so alarming that a proposal has been made to create special relief stations where persons contemplating self-destruction might go and receive the help they need. The causes of suicide are most often lack of money, illness, neurasthenia and unrequited or obstructed love. Could the sufferers receive good advice, a little money or the intervention of the proper person it is thought their intention might be shaken and their lives saved. Pastors, laic confessors, psychanalysts and regular physicians might be drafted into service. The question remains whether intending suicides could be induced to have recourse to such life-saving stations.

For hundreds of years dueling has been one of the features of life at Heidelberg university, but the parliament not long ago, sitting at Baden, decided that student dueling came under the antidueling law. After several students were arrested the student body got up in arms and formally protested against the regulation which robs them of one of their cherished college traditions.

FEDERAL RESERVE HELPS FARMERS

How Its Aid to England's Return to a Gold Standard Benefits American Agriculture.

By M. A. TRAYLOR
Second Vice President American Bankers Association.

There has been no more important event for the American farmer and stock man since the Armistice than the recent return of Great Britain to a gold standard. It seems a long distance from the Montana farm to the gold vaults of the Bank of England, but the price the farmer gets for his wheat and cattle depends not a little on that gold.

M. A. Traylor

The farmer sells his wheat to the elevator man and yet the real buyer, in many cases, is an Englishman, a Frenchman, a German, or an Italian. About one-third of the wheat crop is usually sold abroad and this part is a large factor in fixing the price of the entire crop. Between the farmer and the foreign buyer there are many steps. In recent years the most important step has been that at which the foreign buyer has to pay the American exporter, for the international mechanism of payment has been badly out of order because Europe was off the gold standard. It was just as though an English buyer drove up to your farm house, bargained for your wheat and drew up the contract. But when you discussed payment, he said: "I'm sorry I haven't any good United States money to pay you with; I'll have to pay you in my English paper money, which isn't worth its face value in gold. I don't know what it may be worth next week, but that is your risk."

A Deadly Foe of Trade

How many would be willing to sign contracts on this basis? Yet that is the way most of the world's trade has had to be carried on since the Armistice. In practically all countries except the United States the currencies have had no fixed value in gold, but have changed in value from day to day. Whenever one country sold anything to another country, somebody had to take the risk of loss because the value of the money might change before payment was made. Such uncertainty of payment is a deadly foe of trade, and people were afraid to do any larger international business than they had to.

Exports of food stuffs from the United States fell from two and a half billion dollars in 1919 to eight hundred millions in 1923, and the difficulties of European buyers in making satisfactory payment for American farm products was one of the large factors in the drop in the prices of farm products. But now the recent action of Great Britain in declaring that it will again redeem its paper money in gold means that British buyers of American products can pay for them with money which is accepted the world over at its face value in gold. With the return of Great Britain to the gold standard, a majority of the countries of Europe have paper currencies equal to gold.

How Reserve Banks Helped

American bankers have assisted in the British return to the gold standard by giving a $100,000,000 credit to the British government. But more important than this was the action of the Federal Reserve Banks in granting the Bank of England material co-operation. They placed $200,000,000 gold at the disposal of the Bank of England for two years, to be used by it, if necessary, in maintaining the gold standard. The readiness of the Reserve Banks thus to co-operate was an important influence in the willingness of the British to take this all important step.

This action of the Reserve Banks was a most constructive step in aid of American farmers and producers who will benefit greatly by the removal of this element of uncertainty from their export transactions. If all the sins of omission and commission charged againts the Federal Reserve System by banker, business man, live stock man or political blatherskite in the last five years were true, and practically none of them are, the service rendered commerce and industry by the System in connection with the restoration of the gold standard in so large a part of the world would far outweigh any mistakes that those in charge of the System may have made. No banker, business man or farmer should permit any self serving declaration by favor seeking demagogue to swerve him from a determination to see that the System is maintained for the future welfare of the country.

Fundamentally conditions are very sound and we are doing a very large volume of business, no little part of which is due to the equalizing and stabilizing effect exercised by the Federal Reserve System on the credits of the country. Throughout all the stress of the last five years there have been no times of either stringency or plethora of bank credit. Rates have run along on a rather level keel and in my judgment have had much to do with the stable volume of business which we have enjoyed, and which is quite contrary to the old experience of the aftermath of panics. With a credit structure such as only the Federal Reserve System can guarantee, I feel we need have no apprehension but on the contrary sound optimism for the future.

GREAT GOLD BELT IN SAN DIEGO COUNTY AWAITS DEVELOPMENT

Forty years ago gold mining was the chief industry of San Diego county, and there is no reason why the mining of the precious metals should not again become our chief source of wealth, says Editor H. C. Cooke in the San Diego "Mining and Oil News." The great gold belt, extending from Mesa Grande on the north to Metal Mountain on the south, a distance, roughly speaking, of 30 miles, is an almost undeveloped mineral zone. The $10,000,000 that this area has yielded in the past, is only a fraction of what it may be made to yield if properly developed and worked.

The gold belt referred to above is geologically the same as the great Mother Lode of Northern California, which has yielded hundreds of millions. However, the Mother Lode has been worked to a depth of more than 5000 feet and is still producing, while there is but one mine in San Diego county that has reached a depth of more than 350 feet. There are several mines operating along this belt at the present time, yet this Julian-Banner belt is not the only gold-producing region of San Diego county. Others may in time exceed it in value and extent, adding untold millions to the wealth of the county.
